

Public Health nurse with a passion for photography and a degree in Visual arts.

Language: SWE, FIN, ENG

Location: Vaasa, open to traveling for work

Dream jobs: Travel photographer, development work in the health sector.

Introduction:

This talent has a passion for the process of creation and initiation. They are a natural competitor with themselves, constantly taking innovative steps towards the new and unique. In work environments, they uplift and motivate others, recognizing and promoting their talents. Whether absorbed in solitary pursuits or collaborating with a group, this person thrives in the present moment, where their persistence shines. This is an ideal candidate for any team in the visual industry or in the health sector seeking a versatile and innovative contributor.

Values:

Authenticity, communication and balance.

Personality analysis:

This is a person that finds joy and fulfillment in the process of creation and initiation. They are spontaneous, and adapt quickly to changes in the environment. This is a person that performs their best when they are completely absorbed in the present moment, doing what they love to do – on their own or with a group of people. They are able to focus on one thing and do it persistently, and also quickly shift to another work task. Being able to decide when to do what task benefits them, as they perform best when they have freedom. Freedom to decide how they want to do a certain task and being creative, is also something that benefits them and develops them. When thinking about the future and focusing on things that are uncertain about the future, they may become mentally anxious and lose their contact with their own inner stability. Therefore, jobs that require one to be innovative and creative in the here and now moment, doing something practical – would be very suitable for this person.

This person thrives in situations that require innovation and pushing boundaries. They love to compete with themselves, and find strength in taking innovative steps towards something completely new and unique. When in balance, they have a positive impact on the work environment, uplifting and motivating others to perform better. With their ability to see and uplift other people's talents, they have a positive impact on teams. When they are in stressful and dysfunctional environments for too long, they may lose their ability to defeat fears and compete with themselves.

Well being in the workplace and well thought of work environments are especially important for this person as they are deeply affected by the environment they are in.

They have a natural talent, and their natural talent shines through them when they have some alone time for introspection and deep internal processing of experiences - which they often feel a need to do after work time. But, they also need some kind of space at work where they can withdraw and focus on their own tasks. In contrast, they are also very social with a need for networking and influencing other people. If you are looking for someone that love to work both in teams and on their own, this talent could be the one for your company!

When interacting with other people, they are deeply caring, empathetic and friendly. Being able to nourish other people and take care of others, especially people in need, gives them joy. "To give to someone else is to give to oneself".

In summary, this talent embodies a blend of dynamic energy, transformative qualities, and a keen ability to seize opportunities.

Strengths:

Innovative, self going, good at networking, creative, caring.

Experience:

Two and a half years of experience working as a health nurse with young adults. In this ongoing job, they enjoy helping young people with mental well-being and having the opportunity to make a difference. They also have five years of experience working as a nurse, mainly temporary employment in different cities. They don't want to work as a nurse anymore, but enjoyed the practicality in the nursing job. The stressful environment at hospitals does not suit this candidate, and the irregular working hours with shift work has a negative impact on their health.

Personal interest:

With their Sony A7 IV they take captivating snapshots, expressing themselves in the art of photography.

Education:

Health nurse, Higher education.

Practitioner of visual arts, vocational school.